Proceeding to some extent on lines elsewhere laid down, I have enforced that side of the subject which it seemed to me could be most usefully enlarged upon, namely, the literary. This appears to be an aspect too much neglected, in favour of mere rules of speech, by many treatises on Elocution. Aspirants to public speaking have been considered in a special chapter, which should in all instances be supplemented by the one on Voice Training, and the one on Gesture. Elocution classes, such as meet in various Public Institutions, will no doubt find the specimens of Prose and Verse well adapted to their requirements, and to students of these classes a study of the introductory argument will hardly be superfluous. The needs of High Schools and Colleges - especially of pupils from the age of about twelve forward - have been carefully kept in view, the several departments of literature represented providing ample scope for class-reading, and again for public recitation at annual Prize-givings, Speech-days, c.
