James Jackson, of Sandwith, Whitehaven, to Mr. George Seatree and Others, Describing His Wonderful Octogenarian Mountaineering and Climbin Exploits in Cumberland, 1874-1878 In his recent most interesting lecture at Penrith, oil Rock Climbing in Cumberland and other places, Mr. George Sentree showed a portrait of the late Rev. James Jackson, Saudwith, and told of some of the remarkable feats performed by the veteran in the way of mountaineering. It is nearly thirty years since the Patriarch met his tragic death, and not many are left who can say they knew him well. Mr. Seatree, however, not only had that privilege - for such indeed is a true description - but he enjoyed a long correspondence with Mr. Jackson, extending over about four years. Mr. Seatree has very kindly placed the letters at my disposal, and believing that they will be of general interest, but particularly to-those who love our Lakeland fells, I have made some extracts. In 1873 Messrs. Edward and Thomas Westmorland, of Penrith, and four...
