Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Memoirs of Silvio Pellico: Or My Prisons Silvio Pellico, a distinguished Italian poet, was born in the year 1789, at Saluces, in Piedmont, where his father, Honorato Pellico, also a poet, held a situation in the post-office. Notwithstanding a sickly infancy, the love of poetry early took possession of his soul. He was a poet, so to speak, from his cradle: at ten he had composed a tragedy. He had an emulous companion in his classical studies, in his elder brother, Luigi, who has since become a distinguished comic poet. Both having, at an early age, evinced a genius for dramatic composition, their father encouraged its development by arranging the scenes which they composed, and aiding them in the construction of a little stage, where they recited their effusions. Silvio removed with his father to Turin, where he pursued his studies with promising success, and where his taste for letters became more decidedly manifest. Here he is said to have formed an attachment with a young lady; but Providence saw fit to remove, by an early death, the object of his affection. This was his first love, and his first sorrow; the remembrance of which, his after sufferings were! never able to obliterate. At the age of sixteen, he accompanied his mother to Lyons, where he resided four years with a wealthy cousin of hers, dividing his time between a refined and elegant society and the study of those beautiful productions of genius with which the French literature abounds. But, suddenly seized with what is called le mal du pays, occasioned by reading a new poem by Foscolo, The Tombs, he felt an irresistible attraction...
